

Peasant Permaculture Design Course May 22- June 21, 2018

Wheaton Labs, near Missoula MT, will be hosting a new Permaculture Design course this year! The course is designed for hands-on learning, and for folks low on funds with plenty of time. We are calling it the Peasant Permaculture Design Course (PPDC). For each day's 4 hours in the classroom, we do another 4 hours of hands-on project work at Wheaton Labs, an experimental permaculture space in the beautiful Rocky Mountains.

The Peasant PDC will have a strong focus on practice, projects, and experience. The course will be led by Erica Wisner, with guest instructors from around the region. Essential topics include soils, water, community living, forestry, building, and appropriate technologies.

This is a project-based course. Each project teaches hands-on skills relating to course material, such as plant ID, forest and garden food production, hands-on homestead building and cooking skills, and all aspects of a resilient lifestyle.

Other PDCs cost $1200 to $3600 for 2 weeks. This course offers a full month of adventure education for only $580! Some people think we're crazy, but we care about being a safe, affordable place for education and sustainability.
